

APRRN's ROHINGYA PLEDGE

APRRN commits

- a. To empower refugees with knowledge about their rights, legal procedures thereby fostering a community that is informed and proactive in seeking justice.
- b. To provide training and capacity-building programs for legal professionals working within and for the refugee camps.
- c. To collaborate with local legal aid organizations to enhance the scope and effectiveness of legal support within the camps. Through strategic partnerships, we aim to pool resources and expertise for the benefit of the refugee community.

APRRN commits

- a. To support and facilitate community-led initiatives that promote collaboration, cooperation, and mutual support within the refugee camps.
- b. To support refugee-led initiatives which aim to empower through skills and education that is central to resilience within the camps. These initiatives will equip individuals with practical skills, fostering self-reliance and creating pathways for future employment and entrepreneurship.
- c. To amplify voices of refugee-led organizations working on several issues ranging from responding to socio-political to economic and legal concerns raised by individuals in the community.

APRRN commits

- a. To support and engage with refugee-led organizations working to improve access to education for rohingyas in camps in Bangladesh. We will actively seek out opportunities to showcase their stories, achievements, and challenges, ensuring that their narratives are heard and respected on national and international platforms.
- b. To explore ways to build the capacity of refugee-led organizations.
- c. To foster collaborative relationships with refugee-led organizations, other stakeholders, and governmental bodies to create a comprehensive and supportive network. By actively engaging in partnerships, we aim to leverage collective strengths to address the complex challenges surrounding access to education.

APRRN pledges:

- a. By 2025: the establishment of a Rohingya Think Tank led by a minimum of 10 Rohingya refugees with understanding of international and domestic legal and protection frameworks, informing the planning of response, resilience and solution interventions and driving the establishment of normative frameworks in the regional and global level.
- b. By 2027: the Rohingya Think Tank will provide learnings and guidance on this model of advocacy in one report.
